Combat Center to experience power outages for a brighter tomorrow

STORY BY CPL. DAVE FLORES

The Combat Center will undergo planned base-wide power outages for three non-consecutive weekends starting Saturday. The installation's Public Works Division will work on substation repairs, installation of lightning protection systems and micro-grid expansion from the end of October to mid-November to improve the base's energy resiliency.

"The improvements being made across the installation are to better prepare the base against power outages and lightning strikes," said Ensign Alvin Rudolph, facilities engineering and acquisition division construction manager, PWD. "There are a lot of out dated systems and back-ups across the base. With these new improvements, we are putting preventative systems in place to ensure that we keep the base's power running."

PWD recognizes the inconvenience these outages will present to Combat Center patrons and has worked diligently to minimize the amount of time these essential updates will take to occur. As a result, the scheduled outages were cut down from 14 to four then ultimately reduced to three.

According to Gary Morrissett, utilities manager, PWD, these improvements will help keep damage made to the systems in the event of things such as lightning strikes to a minimum.

"I have been here for over 30 years and improvements have been made in leaps and bounds," Morrissett said. "From high winds to equipment failures, there used to be outages almost every week. There have been so many improvements over the last 10-15 years and we plan on making it better."

The outages are scheduled during the day on the weekend to assist PWD employees with visibility of wires and systems and ensure their safety while working. The schedule for the outages are as follows:

Marine Corps' Top Shot

Every week, thousands of fans cast their votes for the best photograph posted on the Corps' Facebook page. This week's top shot comes from Sgt. Ricky Gomez.

Marines with Headquarters Battalion ascend to the top of the Kansas Tower hill during a 6 mile hike around Marine Corps Base Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, Oct. 6. The hiking program is designed to increase physical and mental stamina, build esprit de corps and bolster combat readiness in the Marines within HQBN.

Wolfpack 6: the proud, professional and proficient

STORY BY
CPL. DEVIN ANDREWS

Pride, professionalism and proficiency are just words to some, but to Lt. Col. Rafael Candelario, battalion commander, 3rd Light Armored Reconnaissance Battalion, also known as Wolfpack 6, those are the marks of a Marine.

“When people think about Marines across the world, not just in America, they think of Marines who are proficient,”

Candelario said. “Marines who can do their job, whatever their military occupational specialty is, they will do what they can to improve themselves every day.”

According to Candelario, all Marines display a high degree of professionalism in what they do, and they train to be subject matter experts in the job field. The mark of a professional is one who does what they can in their every day job in order to help those around them.

“The reason we have the Marine Corps we do today is because people have an expectation of Marines being consummate professionals,” Candelario said. “We maintain that image by always getting the job done.”

Marine Corps non-commissioned officers are the leaders of the aforementioned traits. The example of what it means to be a Marine is passed through the ranks by NCOs.

As the backbone of the Marine Corps, they must uphold the standards and traditions of those who came before them.

“If you have a unit that is proficient and professional, then the pride will be inherent in anything and everything that they do,” Candelario said. “They’ll take pride in going to work every day, they will be proud to represent any unit that they’re in and they will instill the professionalism and proficiency that is expected of them into every facet of their lives.”

No matter where they are or how much time has passed since they served, Marines pride themselves on the achievements of the Marines who came before. Men and women across the world join the Marine Corps to challenge themselves to be better, protect our Nation and defend their brothers and sisters in arms. Throughout their journey, whether it last four years or until retirement, pride, professionalism and proficiency are three of the many traits they will acquire and carry with them for the rest of their days.

WHAT I'VE LEARNED

OVELAR ENJOYS PLAYING SOCCER IN HER SPARE TIME. IN 2005 SHE WAS INTRODUCED TO SOCCER BY HER DAD, AND MOST OF HER TIME BECAME DEDICATED TO PRACTICING.

Alejandra Orange, Ca. Corporal, administrative clerk, Installation Personnel Administration Center

BRISEIDA OVELAR

> I grew up in Orange, Calif., with my mom, step-dad and younger sister. We were a middle-class family in a small one bedroom, one bathroom apartment. Although we didn't have the biggest house, my parents always took care of us. We traveled a lot with our dad for work and every Sunday was family day.

> Growing up, I had to sleep in the living room of my apartment because my parents had the only bedroom in a one bedroom apartment. It helped me learn at a young age to rely on myself for comfort and not be scared of things, like the shadows the furniture would cast at night.

> I never knew my biological father. For most of my younger years I always thought my step- father was my biological dad. When I was 14 years old, my mother sat me down and told me the truth about my father. I didn't have any interest in meeting him because he never showed any interest in my mother and me.

> When my sister was born in 2002, it changed my life. Since both my parents worked long, early hours I took it upon myself to help raise my sister.

> Raising my sister was a learning lesson for me. It helped me to mature quicker than most of my peers because of the responsibilities I had. As her older sister I felt like it was my responsibility to help take care of her.

> In 2005 I was introduced to soccer by my dad, and most of my time became dedicated to practicing. Once I was in 7th grade, I tried out for a local team. I then began playing at least six games a weekend with my dad as my mentor. He'd always make a point to push and motivate me at every game, no matter how hard it was.

> I played against club teams that were expensive to be a part of, but once they saw how talented I was, they recruited me to play for them. I enjoyed playing and overcoming the challenges that came with it because I pushed myself every day and it helped me stay in shape.

> After high school, I attended community college for two years. I studied all of my general education classes so I could focus on a degree in orthodontics or teaching.

> My parents never had enough money to afford my college, but they helped me pay for my books. While I was in school I worked two part-time jobs during any free time I had to help afford my education. My dad never helped with the costs, but my mom was my biggest supporter. She wanted me to be successful and finish my education.

> After my second year of college I was tired of going to school and working two jobs. On top of everything, my parents and I weren't seeing eye to eye anymore. I decided it was time for a break.

> I already had friends who were in the Marine Corps, and as silly as it sounds, I thought the Marine Corps was the only branch of service. I decided to talk to a recruiter and after that I knew I wanted to join.

> One thing my mother taught me was to always value hard work, where my father taught me to be humble and patient. It definitely helps me in the Marine Corps and their impact has helped me become who I am today.

> Throughout my life, civilian and military, I never really had someone I get along with to guide me in my decisions. I was always forced to learn things the hard way or on my own. Having someone I aspire to be like is a distant thought because I want to do so many different things.

> A quote I live by is, "Yesterday's history, tomorrow's a mystery and today's a gift from God and that's why we call it the present." Everything in this quote makes sense to me. Throughout my life I've been able to leave yesterday in the past and move forward toward tomorrow in hopes it will be a better day than the day before. It helps me maintain a positive mentality.

Combat Center Commissary reopens their doors

STORY AND PHOTOS BY PFC. MARGARET GALE

The Combat Center's Commissary reopened its doors Saturday, following a week-long closure caused by a health code violation that was discovered after a routine inspection.

After the health code violation was reported, officials from the Defense Commissary Agency and the installation's command worked diligently to restore the facility to the standards the patrons expect and deserve. A customized integrated management training plan was implemented for the store to take into account the environment in which it operates. The plan includes proactive measures, such as making sure store entries are properly closed when not in use, providing proper training for employees and promptly cleaning up spills.

During the reopening celebration the Commissary held a plethora of sales throughout the store, along with opportunities to enter a raffle and win prizes.

Military members have utilized commissary benefits since 1825. The safety, health and well-being of Combat Center patrons remain the utmost importance to the Commanding General, Maj. Gen. William F. Mullen III and his staff. The Combat Center will continue to ensure that quality resources are provided to families, employees and service members aboard our installation.

Combat Center Commanding General Maj. Gen. William F. Mullen III, is briefed on the recent sanitary improvements by Army Lt. Col. Alisa R. Wilma, director of health and safety, Defense Commissary Agency, and Army Capt. Candace Wimbish, officer in charge, Twentynine Palms Veterinary Services, at the reopening of the Combat Center's Commissary, Saturday. The command and DeCA worked diligently to restore the facility to the standards the patrons expect and deserve.

improvised explosive devices. The culminating event for the training was a motorized fire and maneuver exercise.

“This training event was important because it helps us to boost our survivability and adaptability as a platoon,” said Capt. William Pendergast, transportation services company commander, CLB-5. “The platoon simulated movement through an unblocked ambush, taking contact from the east and engaging while moving logistics vehicles and gun trucks out of kill zones. They were effective in suppressing the targets and moving the whole convoy out of the kill zone.”

According to Sgt. Devin Crawford, assistant operations chief, CLB-5, this training is vital in teaching

Marines how to respond in real-life scenarios. Whether it’s receiving contact, being hit by IED strikes or evacuating casualties, training like this benefits not only individual units but the Corps as a whole. Bettering their unit directly affects the units they interact with therefore improving the operational readiness of America’s force in readiness.

Scott Wheeler, counter improvised explosive device instructor, Marine Corps Engineering School, demonstrates how to use a compact metal detector for Marines from Combat Logistics Battalion 5, which is based out of Marine Corps Base Camp Pendleton, Calif., at Range 114 aboard the Combat Center, Saturday.

October is bike month

The Combat Center and Natural Resources and Environmental Affairs Division are sponsoring October Bike Month 2017. This will be the second time this event has taken place. Whether you bike to work or school to save money or time, preserve your health, offset your carbon emission footprint or simply to explore your community, October Bike Month is an opportunity to celebrate the unique power of the bicycle and the many reasons we ride.

NREA encourages all cyclists to sign up, whether it be as individuals or as part of a team of up to 10 riders, and to log your miles throughout the month. Individuals and teams accumulating the highest number of miles will be recognized weekly. The winning team at the end of the month will get to hold the rotating Bike Challenge trophy in their work center.

To sign up and log your rides, visit www.strava.com/. On Strava explore clubs, search Combat Center, "find a worksite" and join a worksite. If your worksite hasn't been established, contact Eddie Valls at 760-830-8480. Once you've joined, log your rides on Strava and your weekly and monthly miles will be tracked.

This program is open to everyone, including active duty, civilians, dependents and children. We encourage you to sign up and log your miles to and from the office and for recreational rides. For any questions, contact Valls via phone or email him at joe.valls@usmc.mil, or contact Rick Buckles at 760-830-8239, or richard.buckles@usmc.mil.

Marines, sailors join town in celebrating Pioneer Days Parade

PFC. RACHEL K. YOUNG

Marines with 3rd Light Armored Reconnaissance Battalion ride in a Light Armored Vehicle during the annual Pioneer Days Parade in Twentynine Palms Saturday. Pioneer Days recognizes those who settled in the area and developed the community as it is today.

STORY BY LANCE CPL. PRESTON MORRIS

TWENTYNINE PALMS, Calif. – Combat Center Marines and sailors took part in the annual Pioneer Days Parade, Saturday. The parade, which took place along Adobe Road and Highway 62, is an annual event that commemorates the original settlers to the local area and those who developed the community into what it is today. It consists of events around town, including a fair at Luckie Park, a reception at the Old Schoolhouse and the main event, which is a parade through the town.

At the commencement of the event the Headquarters Battalion Color Guard and Naval Hospital's Color Guard presented the Nation's colors. There were several high-profile guests in attendance to include Lt. Col. Michael T. Cable, commanding officer, Headquarters Battalion and Capt. Najmeh Hariri, commanding officer, Robert E. Bush Naval Hospital. For the duration of the parade, Cable was driven by Jim Harris, former mayor of Twentynine Palms in a Ford Mustang.

During the event, 3rd Light Armored Reconnaissance Battalion, Marine Corps Communication-Electronics School and the Combat Center Fire Department were present to represent the installation. 3rd LAR displayed several tactical vehicles, MCCES students marched in their service "C" uniform and the installation's fire department brought their ladder engine.

"I love it when the Marines take part in the parade," said Sherry MacMillan, a resident of Twentynine Palms since 1978. "I remember after Operation Desert Storm when the Marines returned they had a big flyover with jets. It's always great to see the Marines support the community."

The relationship between the city and the Combat Center is one that's nearly as old as the Pioneer Days Parade itself. The installation often supports local organizations and events that the town hosts. In turn, the Marines are shown gratitude from residents such as MacMillan.

"I've been coming to this parade in one way or another since 1970," said Joe Savago, retired Master Sergeant and resident of Twentynine Palms. "I think that this year's parade is probably the best one yet."

Federal Impact Aid Survey

Parents, did you return your child's survey card? Be counted.

An Overview for Federally Connected Parents

- ★ Federal Impact Aid is a law that provides a way for the federal government to reimburse local school districts for the loss of property and business tax support associated with federally connected students residing on/off base in the county.
- ★ The funding that your child's school receives in Impact Aid directly impacts his or her education by providing replacement funding for operating expenses such as materials, equipment, staff, special education programming, and building improvements as part of the general funding of the district.

What can I do?

It's simple: Each year your child receives the Federal Survey Card form that requests confidential information regarding his/her federal connection (including military dependents). Simply by thoroughly completing and promptly returning this brief survey, you contribute to your child's school funding!

- ★ Incomplete cards cannot be submitted for Impact Aid; thereby creating a loss of funding for the district.
- ★ Information provided is protected under Privacy Laws.
