

ARMORED THREAT & THREATENED ARMOR

The Mojave Desert is a harsh environment that puts warriors and their armor to the ultimate test during training. When Marines fire and maneuver, they often find an armored friend — the threatened desert tortoise — already holding the high ground. The Marine Corps is committed to protecting threatened and endangered species while maintaining mission readiness. At the Combat Center, that means both armored threat and threatened armor are prepared for future challenges.

The Marines

We're Saving A Few Good Species

