Marines help ARVN soldiers prepare for civilian vocations

DA NANG, VIETNAM-Even for soldiers of the Republic of Vietnam, war and combat tactics must eventually be put aside for a vocation.

This is where a program called the "Vietnamese Veteran's Vocational Training School" and the 1st Marine Aircraft Wing (MAW) is working hand in hand to provide training for civilian careers.

Marine Captain Stanley M. Zenda, wing civil affairs officer, explains how Vietnamese of the Marine Corp's Project Transition Works.

CROSSWORD

"Vietnamese about to be discharged from the army attend a six-week school that deals with the vocational specialty each man has chosen.

"During the last two-weeks of his training he is sent to a utilities section of either Marine Aircraft Group 11 (MAG 11) Marine Wing Support Group (MWSG0 17, or Marine Aircraft Control Group (MACG) 18, for on the job training in one of these sections: motor transport, plumbers and electricians. Once there, each Vietnamese soldier will work with a Marine Supervisor.

Sergeant Chung Ho is 24 years old. He has served as an infantryman in the Army since he was 17. He has little chance to learn any skill other than M-60 Machineguns and platoon tactics, but he has shown an interest in engines, trucks and automobiles. With Ho's family living in Da Nang, he was ideally situated for the Veterans Vocational Program.

Sergeant William Miller is Ho's counterpart — he works in the motor transport section at MACG-18, and this is the second Vietnamese he's had assigned to him.

WHAT I'VE LEARNED

Marlena Salem, N.C. Corporal, chief dispatcher, Marine Wing Support Squadron 374 CARTAGENIA

CARTAGENA HOPES TO GET HER NURSING DEGREE TO HELP THOSE IN NEED. SHE ALSO VOLUN-TEERS HER TIME TO HELP PEOPLE WHO ARE LESS FORTUNATE.

>I grew up in Salem, N.C., with my mother in the early years of my life. When I was still pretty young, I decided to move in with my father for more stability in my life.

>Moving in with him was better for me. Since he was strict, he helped me do well in school and led me toward the right path.

>My father was a flight nurse and my step-mother was also a nurse, which is why I would like to pursue nursing myself when I get older. Watching them care for people really opened my eyes to wanting to do the same thing.

>I was pretty active in school with lacrosse and [Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps.] I will never forget when one of my instructors told me, "Don't let life's little things get to you." I abide by that philosophy today in the Marine Corps and with anything else I do.

>I joined the Corps because I feel like everyone should take the time to serve their country. To be defended by our armed services means that you should want to take the time to do it yourself.

>I feel a lot of pride serving my country, especially in the Marine Corps.

>What I liked about being a motor vehicle operator was that we are essential to the unit's mission. Getting the necessary materials and always having a line for transport is what made me proud of what I did.

>After going to a secondary military occupation school for refueler's course, my job is to refuel all of the aircraft that come onto the landing strip. It's pretty different from my last job, but it's still something I enjoy.

>We have very busy schedules as chief dispatchers, especially when there is an [Integrated Training Exercise] and pilots are coming back from their flights during all hours of the day.

>When I'm not in uniform, I love to travel to new places in California. We live relatively close to everything so if I don't have work on the weekend, I try to go somewhere new and exciting.

>I would consider myself a person of the arts. I like photography, poetry and even scrapbooking. Poetry has become a huge part of my life. It's an outlet for me whether I'm sad or happy.

>I would like to stay in the Marine Corps and take full advantage of all the things it has to offer.

>I want to start working on my nursing degree while I'm still in the military. I haven't decided yet what type of nurse I will be, but I'm leaning toward working with children.

>Something I wrote that I try to live by is, choose the path of most resistance, your destiny is inevitable. It means to never take the easy way out of things, and always be willing to challenge and push yourself. At the end of a lifetime, we all have the same result and you do not want a life filled with the easy way.

Marines with 1st Battalion, 2nd Marine Regiment, participated in Integrated Training Exercise 1-17 aboard the Combat Center, Oct. 21-Nov. 12. The training is in preparation for an upcoming deployment with Special Purpose Marine Air-Ground Task Force Crisis Response and the Black Sea Rotational Force.

During the exercise, the unit teamed with multiple air, logistical and other ground eletechniques and implementation of warfighting capabilities.

"This is the best training you're going to get," said Lt. Col. David Emmel, the commanding officer of 1/2, who also reinforced the idea of maintaining a tactical mindset throughout the course of training in preparation for the unit's deployment.

Upon their arrival, the Marines hit the ground running by conducting company sized attacks on simulated targets. Engineers with 2nd and offensive tactics, breaching provide suppressive fire and "The amount of fire power combative skillsets for potential

"I enjoyed the training, overall it was the best training of my career," said Lance Cpl. James Obrin, a grenadier with 2nd Platoon, Company C, 1/2. "We got a chance to apply what we've learned such as control rates of fire and maneuvering over the harsh terrain."

"The Platoon did an excellent job. We got there and the enemy withdrew because of too much suppressive fire," said 2nd Lt. John S. Robinson, was very impressive; during the defense, the simulated enemy got into our defensive position, but the platoon did a great job at countering the assault and making the simulated enemy withdraw."

Finally, the Marines executed Military Operations in Urban Terrain training. The unit cleared a mock city, thwarting simulated enemies, while also gathering intelligence and providing security to role players.

TOUGH MINDED OPTIMISM by Lou Gerhardt

In the wonderful story the Whisper Test, Mary Ann Bird writes:

"I grew up knowing I was different, and I hated it. I was born with a cleft palate, and when I started school, my classmates made it clear to me how I looked to others: a little girl with a misshapen lip, crooked nose, lopsided teeth, and garbled speech.

When schoolmates asked, "What happened to your lip?" I'd tell them I'd fallen and cut it on a piece of glass. Somehow it seemed more acceptable to have suffered an accident than to have been born different. I was convinced that no one outside my family could love me.

There was, however, a teacher in the second grade whom we all adored-Mrs. Leonard by name. She was short, round, happy-a sparkling lady Annually we had a hearing test....Mrs. Leonard gave the test to everyone in the class, and finally it was my turn. I knew from past years that as we stood against the door and covered one ear, the teacher sitting at her desk would whisper something, and we would have to repeat it back—things like "The sky is blue" or "Do you have new shoes?" I waited there for those words that God must have put into her mouth, those seven words that changed my life. Mrs. Leonard said, in her whisper, "I wish you were my little girl."

Explore Joshua Tree National Park, a nature getaway

STORY BY LANCE CPL. DAVE FLORES

JOSHUA TREE, Calif. – In the Southern Mojave Desert, the terrain is characterized by most as harsh and unforgiving. But located within that vast landscape is an area that many would consider a tranquil sanctuary.

Every year, more than two million people come from around the world to visit Joshua Tree National Park. Sitting north of the Coachella Valley, and neighboring the Marine Corps Air Ground Combat Center, the park provides opportunities endless such as hiking, camping and world renowned rock climbing. It's no wonder to learn why locals and tourists alike flock to this peaceful outdoor wonderland. President When Clinton Bill signed California Desert the Protection of 1994, Joshua Tree Monument was recognized as a national park for California's desert.

Joshua Tree National Park has trails for all-day hikes into the back-country, campgrounds available by permit and is also a popular rock climbing venue.

Along with being given the title of national park, JTNP was allotted 250,000 more acres of land for preservation.

Within the more than 750,000 acres of the national park, there is something for almost everyone. Rock climbing has become a huge attraction in JTNP. According to George Land, public information officer, National Park Services, more than 300,000 climbers have visited the park in 2016 alone. From amateur climbers looking to gain experience, to advanced climbers who are seeking a thrill, there is a vast selection of different climbing routes to choose from.

For Marines, sailors and their families stationed aboard the Combat Center, the national park is most commonly accessed through Utah Trail off of Highway 62 in Twentynine Palms and off of Park Avenue in Joshua Tree. The National Park Service issues an annual pass offering free entrance to all national parks for active duty military members, their dependents and disabled veterans. Whether for a weekend trip or just a few hours, the national park symbolizes more than preserved land in Southern California; it's become a refuge for history, culture and a therapeutic connection to the natural world.
